

SAUNTERINGS

Society will be very much interested today in the wedding of Miss Romola King, daughter of Judge William H. King, to Clarence Elliott Milner, which will take place at the King residence at high noon, Judge King officiating. Miss King will be attended by her sister, Miss Adrienne King, as bridesmaid, and Paul B. King will be best man for Mr. Milner. The ceremony, which will be witnessed only by the relatives, will be followed by a wedding breakfast and later in the day Mr. Milner and his bride will leave for their new home near Gold Strike, in the southern part of the state.

The friends of Miss King and Mr. Milner have known of their engagement for several months, but the announcement of the wedding today comes as a great surprise to the majority of them, as only one or two have been told of it. Miss King is one of the most attractive girls in society and has innumerable friends here, where she has spent her girlhood. Of great personal charm and superior mental endowments, her strong friendships are widely extended and both she and Mr. Milner are representatives of two of the oldest and finest families in the state.

Mr. Milner, who is an aggressive product of the west, is one of the finest men in the city, and thoroughly liked by all who know him and recognize his splendid qualities.

He is taking his bride to the new home he recently built at Deer Lodge, where some of his principal interests are at the present time. They will remain there until spring.

Those who will be present at the ceremony today are Judge and Mrs. King, Mrs. S. B. Milner, mother of Mr. Milner, Mrs. S. S. Milner, Mr. and Mrs. Jay S. Milner, Mr. and Mrs. Paul B. King, Miss Adrienne King and Archibald Milner.

A most interesting announcement in society circles is that of Judge and Mrs. Charles C. Dey, who announce the engagement of their daughter Eliza Opdyke to Marion Henry Foss. The wedding will occur at the First Presbyterian church on the evening of December 21st, and will be followed by a small reception at the home of the bride. During the time intervening between now and the date of the wedding, there will be numerous social affairs given in honor of the bride-to-be, who is one of the most popular and accomplished girls in society. Cards for the affair were issued yesterday and the list of those receiving them includes hundreds of the friends of Miss Dey and Mr. Foss.

Mr. Foss, who is interested in mining at Bingham, is there most of the time, but is frequently here, where he enjoys a wide popularity in mining, club and society circles.

The wedding will be one of the most important affairs of the holiday month and society is anticipating the event with keen interest.

One of the climbers who makes a practice of stepping on those who do not always fall for her particular kind of leadership, met the husband of a former friend while shopping a few days ago and said: "Where in the world have you been keeping yourself; I don't see you anywhere?"

"Well," he replied, "perhaps you might if you were invited where we are."

"Do you know," she continued, "I don't believe I would know your wife now if I saw her."

"That's all right," he retorted, "you've got nothing on her. Good morning."

That a little energy properly directed will bring splendid results and do it quickly is exemplified in the success of the County Fair, which was one of the best shows of the kind ever given here and netted a couple of thousand dollars for the city's poor. Though more was expected, the showing was a fine one and reflects no end of credit on the ladies of the Nonsectarian Charity League, who worked day and night to give the public the best of it at a very little outlay.

We can't remember when the maids and matrons in society have pitched in and worked so hard as they did for this undertaking, and the show they gave was worth ten times what anyone spent to get in or get out.

It started off a busy week with a hurrah, continuing through Teusday and late into Tuesday night and the social herd which has been browsing about complaining of inactivity crowded enough sport into the two evenings to last until it was time to gather about the family tables for the annual Thanksgiving feast.

That was no sooner over until the dances at the University and Tennis clubs were the attractions for Friday evening and both were preceded by a score of happy dinner parties. With the relaxation which always comes on Saturday night, society will have earned a good rest tomorrow morning, and it is barely possible that some of its members will be late for church.

According to the Denver Post, Carroll Brown of that city, who is a favorite in the younger set here, has discarded his mask and the Post tells about it as follows:

Shades of Jupiter—listen to this!
Wonders will never cease.

Carroll Brown, we are told, is about to forsake his "mask."

Yessir. They do say as how he has ordered regular honest-to-goodness gold-rimmed glasses like other human beings wear.

If this is due to her influence, the young fiancée may work some wondrous changes in "Carroll."

There will be a great welcome here for Lord and Lady Aberdeen, as there has been all over America for these notable people. They are both lecturing on the coast at the present time, Lord Aberdeen's subject being "Reminiscences of a Viceroy," and Lady Aberdeen's "Triumphs of Civic Awakening." The funds from their lectures go to the war sufferers in Ireland. During their visit here, Lady Aberdeen will be the guest of a number of prominent club women; Lord Aberdeen will be entertained at one or two affairs given in his honor, and both will be the recipients of many social courtesies.

Just a line in the dispatches the other day announced that E. S. Willard, the English actor, had died. It will be remembered that when he came to New York many years ago, he had a hard time getting a hearing from American audiences, but did better as he traveled westward and won innumerable friends when appearing here at the old Salt Lake theatre. Besides being a great actor, Mr. Willard was a great man and endeared himself to all who met him during his American tours. The news of his demise will be read with sincere regret by all who knew him or were familiar with his art.

An interesting wedding of Wednesday was that of Miss Nan Clawson and Frank McMaster, which took place in the temple and was followed in the evening by an elaborate reception at the home of the bride's father, Spencer Clawson. The pretty little bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Grace Woolley as matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Frances McMaster, Miss Margaret Marshall, Miss Margaret Whitney and Miss Kathryn Marshall. Miss Nabby Clawson was flower girl and Moses Cowley acted as best man for Mr. McMaster. Mr. and Mrs. McMaster will make their home here.

A pretty wedding of Wednesday was that of Miss Miriam Godbe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Godbe, and Alma Jenkinson. The ceremony was performed at the First Congregational church by the Rev. Elmer I. Goshen. It was attended only by the relatives and intimate friends. The bride was attended by Miss Lillian Davis and Frank Jenkinson was best man.

A happy event of Wednesday evening was the annual banquet of the Alpha Chi sorority of the
